

Student Voices: How Ana used CaliforniaColleges.edu Transcript

Narrator: Student Voices: How Ana used CaliforniaColleges.edu.

Ana: My name is Ana Castillo. I am an upcoming third year student at UC San Diego, and I am majoring in public health with a concentration in health policy and management sciences. And my career goal after graduating is to become a hospital administrator and to work in my community. I am a first generation college student, meaning I am the first person in my family to go to college.

Narrator: The website is shown highlighting different aspects available, such as My Plan, College, Career, and Financial Aid.

Ana: Thankfully, I was introduced to the resource of CaliforniaColleges.edu and the platform during my freshman year of high school when I was put in a college and career class for college preparation.

The platform, CaliforniaColleges.edu and its tools for career exploration really helped me determine what I wanted to do in the field. I took many of the assessments provided, including the Interest Profiler and the Multiple Intelligence Assessment. These helped me narrow down what careers I was interested in and which one I really wanted to pursue. The application process for me was really easy in terms of applying to colleges, especially with the CSUs and the UCs because everything was in one place and I did not have to go looking all over the internet to find websites that I didn't know the names to because everything was in CaliforniaColleges.edu through my account.

CaliforniaColleges made the impossible process of starting a new life easy with the incredible resources that the platform provides. I actually wish it had been a required part of our courses in high school to use the CaliforniaColleges.edu because the lessons are way more helpful than anything I had learned in my college and career classes during that time.
